State Teachers College

Lowell, Massachusetts

Today we bid farewell to Associate Professor Herman H. Brase, senior member of our faculty, our beloved friend and colleague. Herman Brase came to Lowell State Teachers College in 1923, thirty-four years ago, coming here from Longmeadow where he had as a student in his school a little boy named Foster Furcolo. In his many years at Lowell he has made outstanding contributions to the life of the City as well as the College. As minister in the Lutheran Church, as administrator of the Parker Lecture Fund, as Secretary of the Lowell Labor Management Citizens Committee, as teacher for more than a quarter century at the Nursing School of the Lowell General Hospital, his influence for good and for truth have permeated and strengthened the entire community.

We will miss his wisdom, his counsel and his loving kindness. God speed him in his later years.

Samuel H. O'Donoghue

DEDICATION

This yearbook is dedicated to Herman H. Brase, Associate Professor at Lowell State Teachers College.

1923-1957

To Mr. Brase, we wish to express our gratitude, our admiration, and our good will. The class of 1957 and Mr. Brase graduate together, we to commence the work in the world for which his efforts have helped prepare us; Mr. Brase to become "Retired Leisure." He has "worked taskwork and has the rest of the day to himself."

DANIEL H. O'LEARY
President
Lowell State Teachers College

You have chosen as your theme "The Merrimack River." Is it because to you the river symbolizes life itself from its birth in the hills until its end in the bosom of the eternal deep? Or do you envisage the spread of education from its origins at the Pierian and Kastalian springs flowing through the centuries until it reaches the infinite sea of wisdom whose final depths are yet unplumbed by questing men? Or is it because the river symbolizes the teacher who carries the swelling waters of learning to increasing multitudes and whose influence cleanses the souls and nourishes the minds of succeeding generations?

May you, like the river, grow in depth and wisdom through the coming years.

D. H. O'Leary

Four years ago an earnest graduate of Harvard and Simmons College School of Library Science came to Lowell Teachers College to take over the duties of librarian. His youngest students were members of the Class of '57, and under his guidance they grew toward mature and professional individuals.

The students of this class felt the influence of this man and selected him their advisor. For four years he has been at the helm of the '57 ship, and has won the respect of all who have known the combination of sympathetic understanding, clear insight, and subtle humor in his personality.

Truly he has taught us to "strive, hold cheap the strain," for "the best is yet to be." With deep humility and just pride we say, "Thank you, Mr. Joyce."

PROF. WILLIAM D. JOYCE

Mr. Joyce was always available for advice when we needed it. Here he talks with Ann Shugrue, Judy Miller, Bob Molleur, Pauline Bergeron, Bob Armstrong and Jocelyn Greene.

"If I seem a little confused this morning, it's because . . ." Above we see the two cute causes of Mr. Joyce's apologies and also Mrs. Joyce.

TO THE CLASS OF 1957

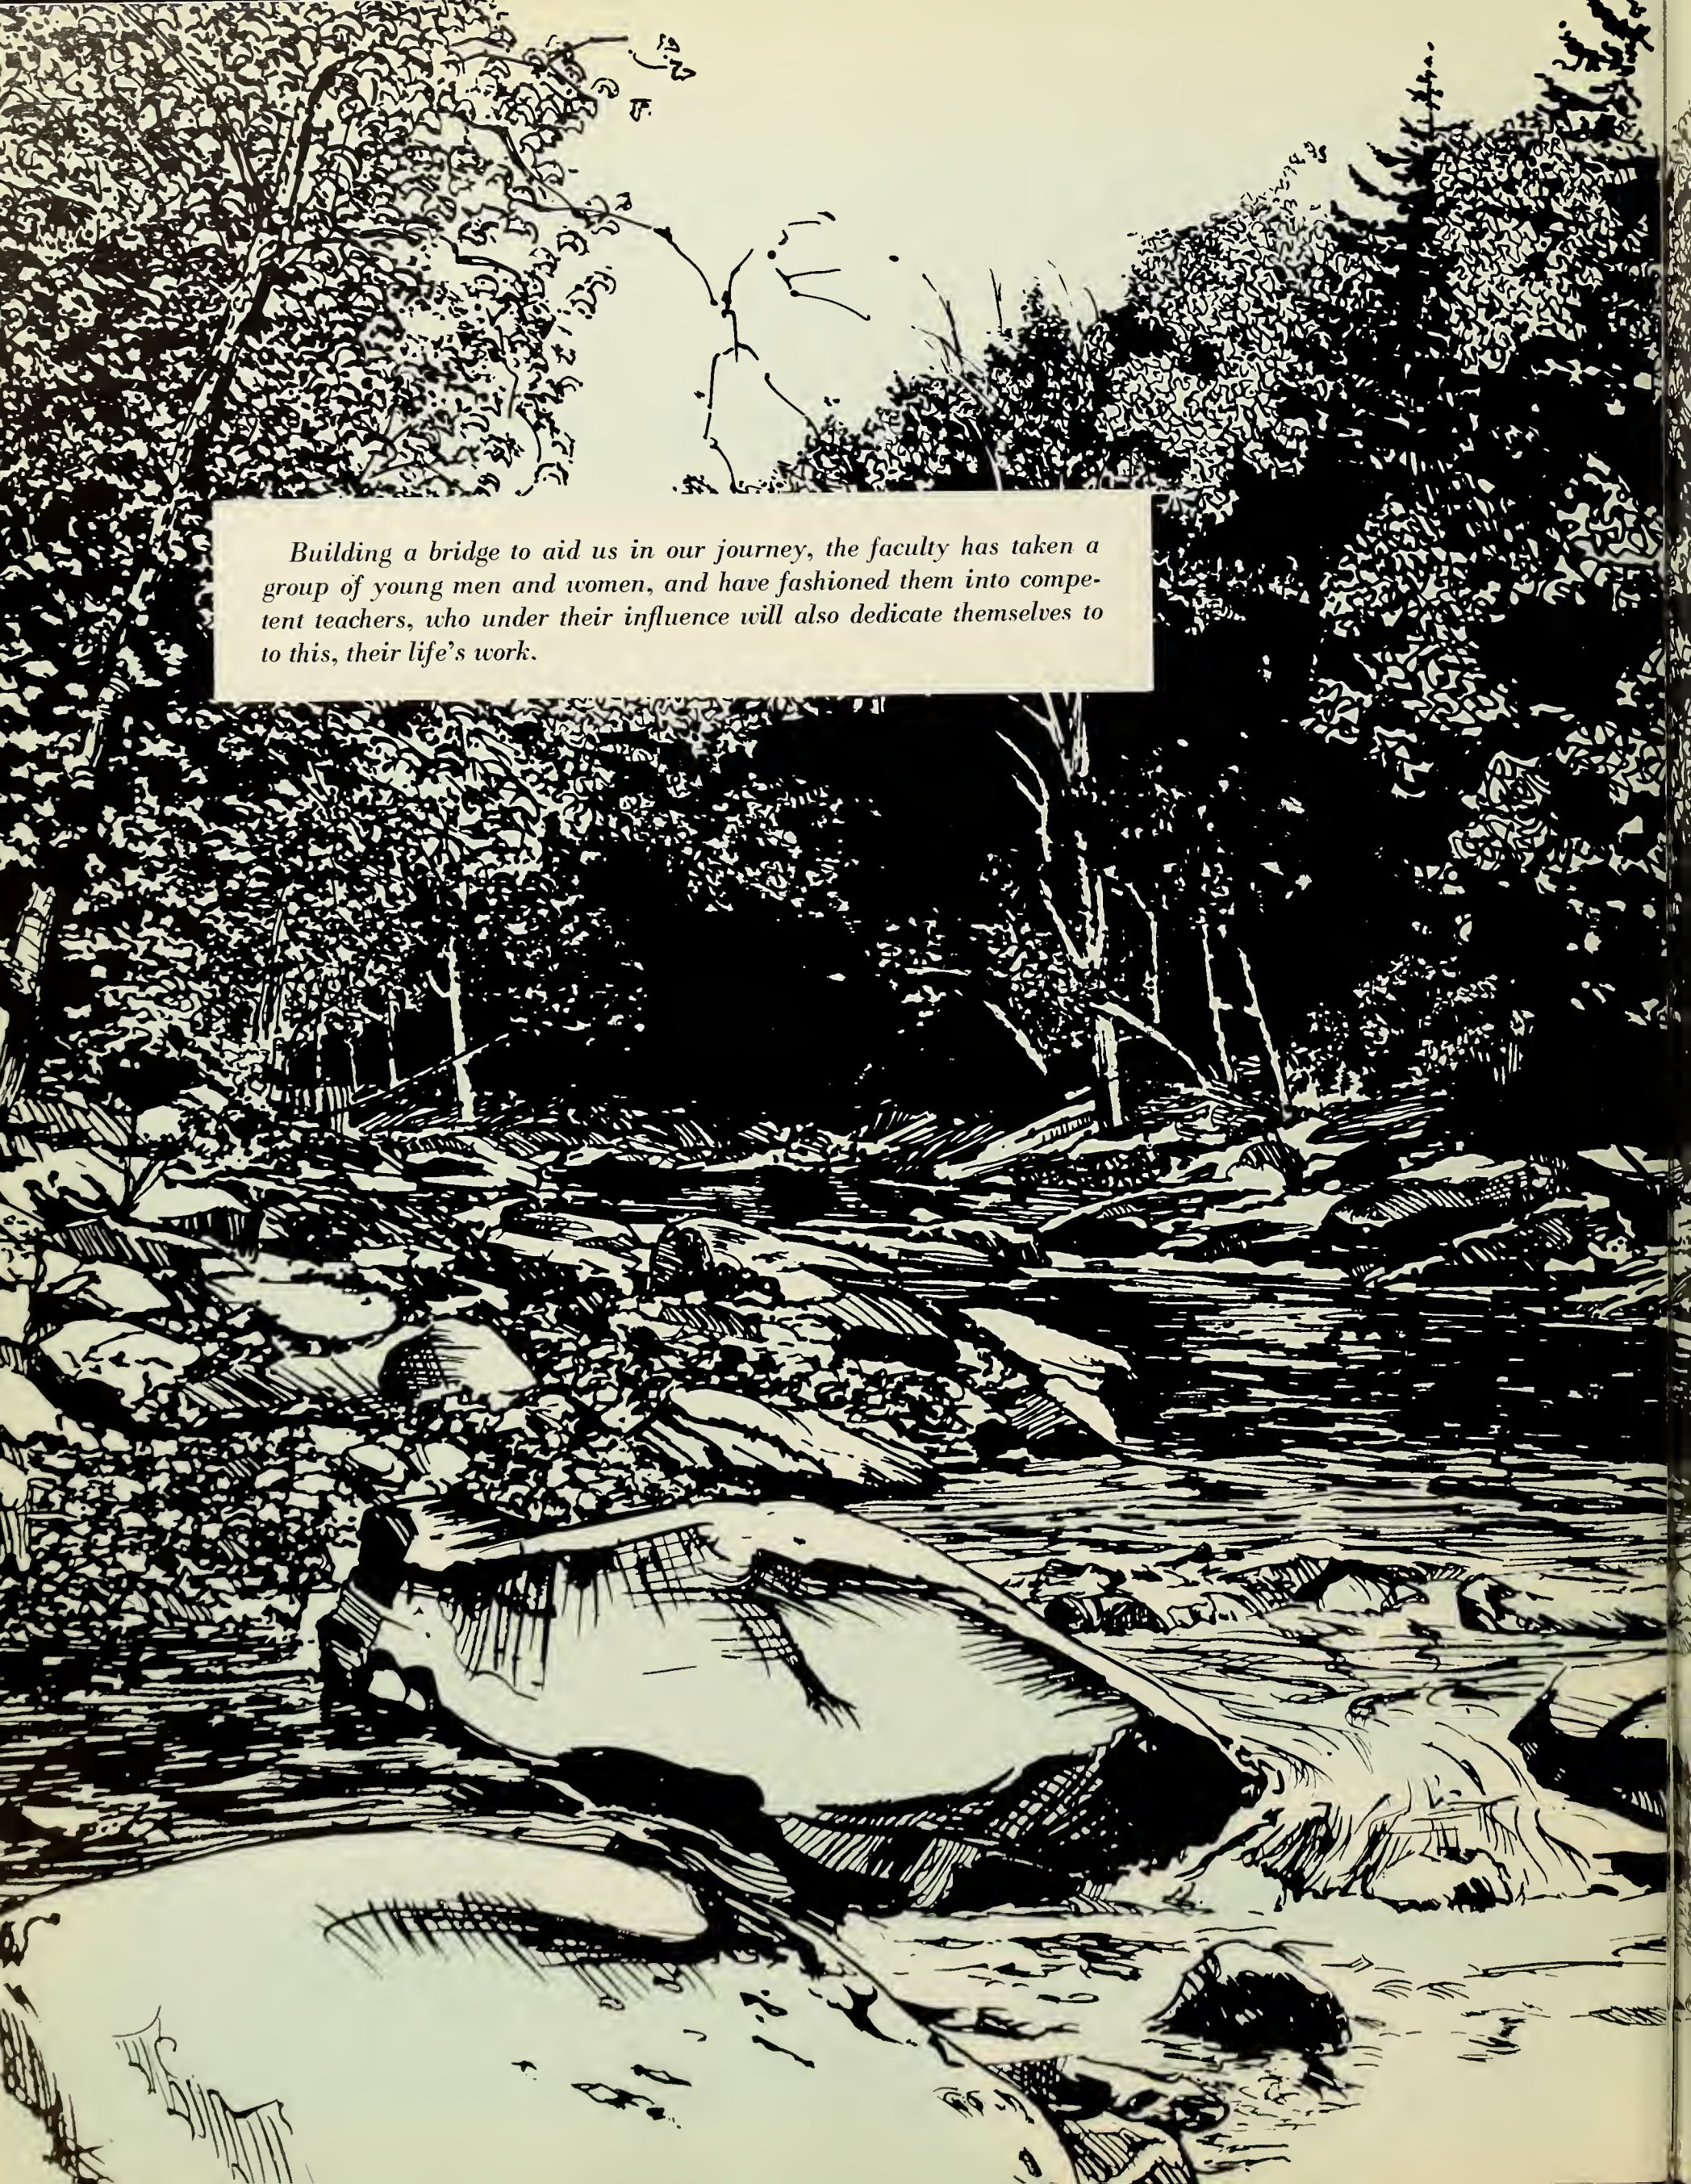

We have, you and I, come to the open sea after four years of travelling down the river symbolized in the theme of this year's Knoll—a river traversing your college undergraduate life. We have shared the calm placid reaches of the academic stream where our journey was easy and pleasant, and we have shared the rapids and cataracts where the going was hazardous and trying. Now, when the swirling current of the river mingles with the deep surge of the ocean—the world outside our ivied walls—we prepare to part.

As in most leave-takings, this one has elements of both sadness and happiness combined in it. I am happy that your goal in coming to Lowell State Teachers College has been attained, but my pleasure is tempered with the knowledge that we must now go our separate ways, and that the experience I have enjoyed so deeply must come to an end.

For both of us, however, this is really only another beginning. You are about to embark on your new career, perhaps the finest open to anyone—that of teacher to the young. As a librarian, I, or my colleagues, will continue to serve you in your new undertaking.

I, therefore, take my leave of you now knowing that you will continue to grow in wisdom and understanding and looking forward to the time when we will meet once more.

William D. Joyce

Building a bridge to aid us in our journey, the faculty has taken a group of young men and women, and have fashioned them into competent teachers, who under their influence will also dedicate themselves to to this, their life's work.

"Five miles meandering with a mazy motion
..... the sacred river ran"

S. T. Coleridge

Like Coleridge's river coursing through Xanadu, so you, the Class of 1957, have coursed your province of undergraduate higher education. Your early meanderings led you through the difficult years of proving yourselves equal to the challenge. . . . success as freshmen and sophomores. Your mazy motion of methods and professional experiences strengthened that proof, and your attainment of the right to don academic robes has brought sureness and swiftness to the motions which realized your potential.

Boston Univ., Ed.M., Ed.D.

From many sources you, of the Class of 1957 have come to be one strongly integrated force. By working and playing together these past four years you have gathered strength and purpose until now with light and with truth you are ready to go along your course.

Each of you will move to his untried shore sustained by the knowledge and the wisdom you have gathered in this port.

As you glide smoothly from this harbor outward, onward, and upward, may all who feel your strength be better for having sailed along your course.

PRAYER

We stand upon the shore of life,
Uncertain of the way,
Our ship must weather storm and strife
Before the break of day.
O help us through the coming gale
Though fierce that it may be,
And from above, send down Thy Love
The truth that we may see.

O guide us through the fog and rain,
Through which we all must pass.
And strength, O Lord, give to the weak,
Who stand before the mast.
The sea is rough, the waves are high,
The shore is far away.
O grant us light, throughout the night,
That we may see the day.

by Priscilla Hoar

As the senior class embarks on the last part of our journey, we leave behind on still water other ships whose crews are not yet prepared to set sail on open seas.

Underclassmen

We shall proceed.

CLASS OF 1960

As our ship wends its way downstream towards journey's end, we remember sojourns on many a small vessel not fully equipped to carry us to our destination, but without whose aid our voyage would not have been as enjoyable or pleasant.

Organizations

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Lecture Committee consists of: Seated: Joanna Flynn, '59; Ruth Flaherty, '57. Standing: Helen Frawley, '60; Richard LaBrie, '58; and Cecile Unice, '58, chairman.

The Student Government Association at Lowell Teachers College is organized to foster and develop self-government within the student body. Composed of elected student leaders, the association regulates and sponsors many campus organizations through the "blanket fee" system, and promotes student activities for the best interests of the college.

The highest achievement of this year's Association has been the establishment of the book store, making texts available to students on campus at reasonable cost.

With Miss Audrey Hughes, Library Committee Chairman, are the class representatives who are: Florine Santos, '58; Debbie Eliopolous, '57; Anne McMahon, '60; and Joanne Nissi, '59.

We, the members of the board of editors, wish to offer this book as a reminder of the many precious days spent in our college, of the friends we shall never forget, and of the professors whose guidance we shall follow.

In September of 1953 we came to Lowell State Teachers College. Now, in June of 1957, we graduate. To casual observers our coming and our going will not appear especially significant. But we know that somewhere between those dates are the happiest years of our lives. We can never relive these moments, nor can we ever quite recapture the familiarity of things, nor the comradeship of classmates, for these things will have passed into memory.

As we accept the challenge that comes to us with our graduation, we cast a lingering look behind. We hope that the pages of this yearbook serve to recall our early joys, our friendships, our young hopes and aspirations, and our successes. Herein we shall be young forever.

Within every man lies the desire to express himself, and with the proper encouragement, this underlying wish to reveal inner thoughts and emotions may be brought to the surface. With some it will perhaps only extend to the point of discussing these ideas in everyday conversations, but there are those who will turn this desire towards creating fiction, non-fiction and poetry. It is to the latter that Pegasus offers a means through which they may develop their creative potential.

In its third year, Pegasus can proudly look back to two successful years of discovering sensitive and mature talent, and hopefully look forward to bringing forth fresh, new talent in the years to come. In this way, Pegasus is fulfilling its prime purpose—to encourage creativeness among the students of Lowell State Teachers College.

The Class of 1957 has seen the Campus Star grow to be one of the finest teachers college newspapers in America. The growth has been from a four page letterpress newsheet, written by a few editors, to four to eight page monthly, with a staff of over forty. The use of the offset printing process, coupled with the exclusive picture-page feature, makes the newspaper outstanding in its field.

Prof. Gertrude Cunningham, advisor to the Campus Star, has played an important part in the improvement of the newspaper. Many of her distinctive ideas have been successfully incorporated into the paper's production. Bill Terris, who has served as editor-in-chief for two years, did the complete re-organization of the staff in his first few months of office, and the rewards are evident to all of us each month when the Campus Star is published.

DRAMA CLUB

The Dramatic Club of Lowell Teachers College, under the direction of Professor Kalervo Kansanniva, is taking steps toward becoming a vital part of the college life here at Lowell. One important achievement of this year's club was the presentation of "Cradle Song" under the sponsorship of the Lowell Moses Greely Parker Lecture Fund.

The performance of this celebrated drama was acclaimed by everyone as the best production in the club's history. Lead by John Gawrys, President, who is assisted by Lois Milliken, Vice-President, Hazel Marie Mello, Treasurer, and Cecile Unice, Secretary, the club's interests have been broadened in all phases of stage production. Visitors to Lowell's campus are always impressed by the newly opened scenic workshop in which sets for all stage performances are created and constructed.

For its spring project the Drama Club is combining efforts with the MENC to produce the musical "Brigadoon." This will tax the club's ability to its peak, since there are eight required set changes.

CONCERT CHOIR

Highlighted by appearances at the Middlesex County Teachers Association meeting at the Metropolitan Opera House in Boston, the national convention of the Music Educators National Conference in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and on-campus in the cantata "Child Jesus" at Christmas time, the Concert Choir has had a busy year. Ably led by one of the outstanding directors of choral music in America, Dr. Edward F. Gilday, chairman of LTC's music department, the highly select group of some forty mixed voices has brought much recognition to LTC.

The Women's Recreational Organization is one of the largest organizations on campus, boasting a membership of three hundred and fifty women students. The program is directed by the W.R.O. Board, which regulates and promotes a variety of sports activities such as golf, swimming, ping pong, basketball, badminton, volleyball and softball, to create in the members a high standard of sportsmanship, a permanent interest in physical recreation and enjoyment of participating in sports. Highlighting the social calendar are the college playdays, both intramural and intercollegiate, co-recreation, dances, and the annual banquet, at which sports awards are presented to members who have successfully fulfilled the requirements athletically, and achievement awards to those who were outstanding administratively.

Once again, as it should be in every competitive activity, good sportsmanship stands as the highest achievement obtained by our 1956 baseball team. Ably captained by Ray Masse '57, the team ended the season with four wins and six losses. Playing their home games on Hadley Field, the team showed evidence of great growth from the formation of baseball as an intercollegiate sport at Lowell a year ago.

The Lowell State Teachers College baseball team of 1956 feels deeply indebted to Coach Cizek, not only for his training in baseball skills, but also for his promotion of fair play and good sportsmanship with rival colleges.

Class History

You spattered us with rotten eggs, poured oatmeal down our backs.
 Shot perfume from your water guns.
 We wore potato sacks.
 The lipstick smeared upon our face was just like thick mud packs,
 Dear Juniors we love you.
 We crawled upon our hands and knees,
 all up and down the field,
 We opened doors, we carried books,
 We bowed, we cringed, we kneeled.
 We sang our songs; we gave the pledge to Mighty Joe O'Neil.
 Now do we belong to you?

"Just follow the river until you reach Wilder St., and take a left." Having obtained this information, the pretty young driver of the grey Oldsmobile headed the car in the direction indicated and proceeded on her way. The occupants of the car were all very young and excited, for this was their first day at COLLEGE.

It was on a clear, bright September morning that the class of nineteen-hundred and fifty seven trooped into "the building" at the State Teachers College at Lowell. Greeting us was a very charming and gracious hostess, whom we would later come to know very well, but why did she keep using the phrase "professional people", and why did she address us as though we were grown up? Certainly on that first morning, being addressed as adults came as quite a shock to most of us—who were fresh out of high school and preparing to board the '57 Ship on its four year voyage toward our chosen profession. "Is this really for me?" "Do I really want to teach?" These were some of the thoughts running through our young minds as we sat in "the hall" taking one test after another. Our charming hostess was speaking again. . . "next week". . . "initiation". . . What on earth was she saying? We certainly won't go through a ridiculous initiation for anyone!

How beautiful the river was that week with the sunlight sparkling on its blue waters! Its banks served as a place of peace and tranquility, and especially of escape from the MIGHTY JUNIORS. . . 'dear juniors, we love you.' Anyway, that's how the song went, and it certainly gave away a few of the gory details of a week long to remember in our impressionable minds.

We soon discovered other "freshmen" who had entered with us. Mr. Joyce, Dr. Gilday and Mrs. O'Laughlin certainly were not fellow students but in some ways there was a common bond between us. We were all new together and had a considerable amount to learn about Lowell.

"I am a low and humble freshman."

The girls of the class soon found out that they were the only class with yellow gym suits, and although most of us didn't know one end of the hockey stick from the other, we donned our "daisy suits" and went down trying. We certainly felt very exclusive.

By January we were all very well acquainted and assembled to organize our class. Mr. Joyce was elected our class Advisor, and a boy from Somerville, Dick Santos, became our Class President. Being the exclusive class that we were, we decided to have an exclusive class color. In our search for something different some of the more enterprising members of our group came up with ROSE RED. It sounded wonderful, so not knowing what we were getting, we voted on rose-red.

Our first social venture, the record-breaking record hop was held in February, and with the assistance of our Tech neighbors across the river, it proved to be a big success. After the dance many of us crossed the river to find out what a fraternity party was all about.

As class day 1954 approached, we were one for all and all for one. We unloaded chairs, washed dishes and comprised every clean-up committee. When we sang our songs that night, we didn't win the banner, but we did feel as though we "belonged" at last, and were finally full-fledged members of L.T.C.

To start the summer off and also to establish a wonderful tradition for the class of fifty-seven, we had a "picnic on the farm" party at John Gawrys', where everybody skipped rope, sang songs in the hay-loft and ate burnt hot dogs. During the next week, everyone left for various parts unknown. Summer jobs, beaches, and lakes attracted our class, but we arrived back in September feeling every inch mature and sophisticated "upper classmen."

ON THE FARM

Professor Edward Knowles displays the proper use of a slide projector to Mary Donahue, Pauline Bergeron, Hazel Mello and Judy Miller.

Our first effort as a class was to try to remedy our financial problem, and to do this we decided to have a "Dues Day" with paid up members eligible for a reimbursement of one years dues. The lucky winner of the drawing was Ann Cogger. Sophomore year also brought our first education courses. The "Child and His Curriculum" and "Introduction to Education" were read and absorbed from cover to cover, by eager would-be teachers. We learned many valuable principles like: "growth is continuous," "the child is an individual," "be flexible," and "grow or go!"

Despite all our research and study, we did take time out for a smattering of social activity. Along with our big sister class, we held "Harvest Moon Glow" just before the Thanksgiving holiday. There were many of us who displayed remarkable skill as we twirled around the floor; nevertheless, a Senior won the prize waltz. In order to avoid any more embarrassing moments, we held our next dance alone. The "Artists Ball" was a dreamy semi-formal and our first attempt at anything so lavish. It proved that there were many beautiful girls in our class underneath the sneakers, socks and baggy sweaters. In fact, our delegate to the Sports Queen Contest, Lois Milliken, came away with top honors, which proved we did have some talent and charm after all.

Other campus organizations that came into being during our Sophomore year were Pegasus, the magazine which encouraged the creativity of our more literary minded students, and the W.R.O., which allowed women students to participate in recreational pursuits. As the year drew to a close, we took the seniors to the farm with us so that they might enjoy for the last time the fun and fellowship of their little sister class.

Our next project was to delve into the responsibilities of purchasing class rings. In our typical manner, we approached the matter with gusto. We viewed blue rings, red rings, green rings and orchid rings. We discussed class rings and college rings, and finally settled on the traditional blue stone which we wear so proudly today.

The expansion program at our college also reached a milestone during this year. Completion of the Arts and Sciences Building was realized, and now came the tramping between buildings. Soggy feet, deep snow and hot sunshine were endured in our passing from class to class. However, the added convenience of expanded facilities were worth the endurance of the atmosphere.

Through the combined efforts of the M.E.N.C. and the Drama Club, the first production staged in our brand-new theatre proved to be quite successful and set a precedence for such a program every year. Having leading roles in the operetta "Iolanthe" were Ronald Selvaggio and Dick Santos from our class. We also proved that we had as much musicality through the production of "Night Must Fall" by the Drama Club. Seniors featured in this production were Lois Milliken, Roy Zabierek and John Gawrys.

METHODS!

September came none too soon for the class of fifty-seven, there was so much to be done. First there were the freshmen to be considered. They had to have an initiation as wonderful as ours was, and we were determined that they should get it. But alas, upon investigating the possibilities, we found that we would not be able to display initiative and skill which had been showered on us by our big sisters and brothers. To keep the activity as constructive as possible, we decided to have a "help week", in which the more outstanding members of the freshman class would have an opportunity to display their talents, washing windows, sweeping floors and all those other knowledges and skills that would prove invaluable to them "in the field."

This also was the year that the dreaded word "methods" became a reality. Some of the members of the class tried to find out why Johnny couldn't read and teach him to sing at the same time. During lunch hours the cafe resounded with puppy-dog cries and song flutes. We were determined that every child should be a singing child even if the only song he learned was "Leaving Old Texas."

By the time December rolled around, we decided that we all needed an evening out to perk up our wilted spirits. Our Junior Prom was held at the Colonial Country Club and certainly made the Christmas holidays extra happy for us. Who will ever forget the grand march and the parties before and after that were such fun?

No shortage of teachers here.

Nor here, either.

At long last, the dream of every student in the class became a reality, for in January some of us began our student teaching. We were finally learning the meaning of that word "Professional". We tried to think, look and act professional at all times. We discarded the sneakers, baggy sweaters, and comfortable chinos for nylons, heels, ties, and other apparel that would help us to look the part. This endeavor was interrupted for some of us when we took a few days leave to attend conventions. In Pittsfield we obtained buckets full of information. At Columbia, the convention was run by classmate Roy Zabierek, and first place rating was obtained by the college newspaper. New York also was the meeting place for the S.G.A. Convention, and the delegates ate at all of the international restaurants at the recommendation of Dr. John Fisher.

Some of the more talented members returned in time to assist with the annual spring production "Ruddigore". Sparked by the dynamic personalities of Jack Higby, the bad baronet, and of Dick Santos, who played the romantic lead, the operetta proved to be the most successful production to date, held in our little theatre.

The end of the Junior year marked some changes in our class leadership. James Doyle was elected our new president to steer the '57 Ship in its last lap of our cruise. One of his first duties was to lead us down the aisle of the little theatre that next November in our caps and gowns to be invested in academic robes. The little theatre was filled with relatives and friends for this happy occasion. But this wasn't the first time the theatre had been filled that year, for during October, for the first time on any such occasion, the theatre was filled to capacity for the Bops Pops which featured our own Ann Shugrue in a solo number.

We went home for the Christmas holidays with feelings of happiness tempered by pangs of regret, knowing that once we returned we would be returning for the last time to the school we had grown to love so very dearly. We did return in January and almost immediately June ninth, our graduation day was on everyone's lips, and talk of senior week and jobs seemed to bring these events unbelievably close to the class, who only a few short months ago, it seemed, was worried about finding its way past a winding river, and into a school, which it immediately took to its heart.

Chatting between sets at the senior dance are: James Doyle, Edith Doherty, Sultana Poullos, Miriam Sullivan, Theresa Rousseau, Robert Morin, Jocelyn Greene, and Robert Molleur.
